Great Rafina River

A photograph of a turtle, likely a pond turtle, resting on a sandy riverbed in shallow water. The turtle's shell is dark brown with a distinct pattern of scutes. Its head is extended to the left, and its front legs are visible. The water is clear, and the sandy bottom is visible. The text "First observation for Great Stream of Rafina by our students" is overlaid in yellow at the bottom of the image.

The little

A photograph of two white egrets in flight over a wetland. The birds are white with long necks and long legs, captured mid-flight with their wings spread. They are positioned in the center-left of the frame. To their right is a large clump of tall, brown reeds. The ground is a mix of sand and shallow water. In the background, a blue and white can lies on the ground. The overall scene is a natural, somewhat desolate wetland environment.

A close-up photograph of a small waterfall. Water is cascading over several large, dark, moss-covered rocks. The water is clear and creates white foam as it falls. The background is filled with lush green foliage and more rocks.
